F	It should be stopped because it is not possible to guarantee her health. Who will be responsible for that if serious symptoms occur?
M	The permission seems to be based on that it is known that serious symptoms do not occur. If she is going to do, people who can deal with emergencies are needed to be around.
N	I wouldn't be so sure about the arbitrary denial. The will of person ought to be respected.

The will of person can respected if the symptoms are mild and there are people who have knowledge about allergies around.

Please write your impressions.

Allergies aren't necessarily should to be considered to the first priority in any situation. Allergy consciousness is only a means to raise the standard of living of the other person, and there are times when it is sometimes better for the partner than for allergy. However, in the example discussed this time, I felt it was difficult to balance the guarantee of the health of the partner and the guarantee of pleasure.
