<About Frozen Food>

Frozen food refers to food that meets the following four main conditions.

① (1)

Fresh ingredients are selected, carefully cleaned, and then the inedible parts are removed. For example, fish, the head, internal organs, bones, and fins are removed.

② (2)

The food is frozen at a very low temperature to prevent the destruction of the food's tissues and changes in quality.

③ (3) Properly

They are (3) to prevent them from getting dirty or misshapen before they reach the consumer's hands. On the package, it shows much information, such as handling and (4).

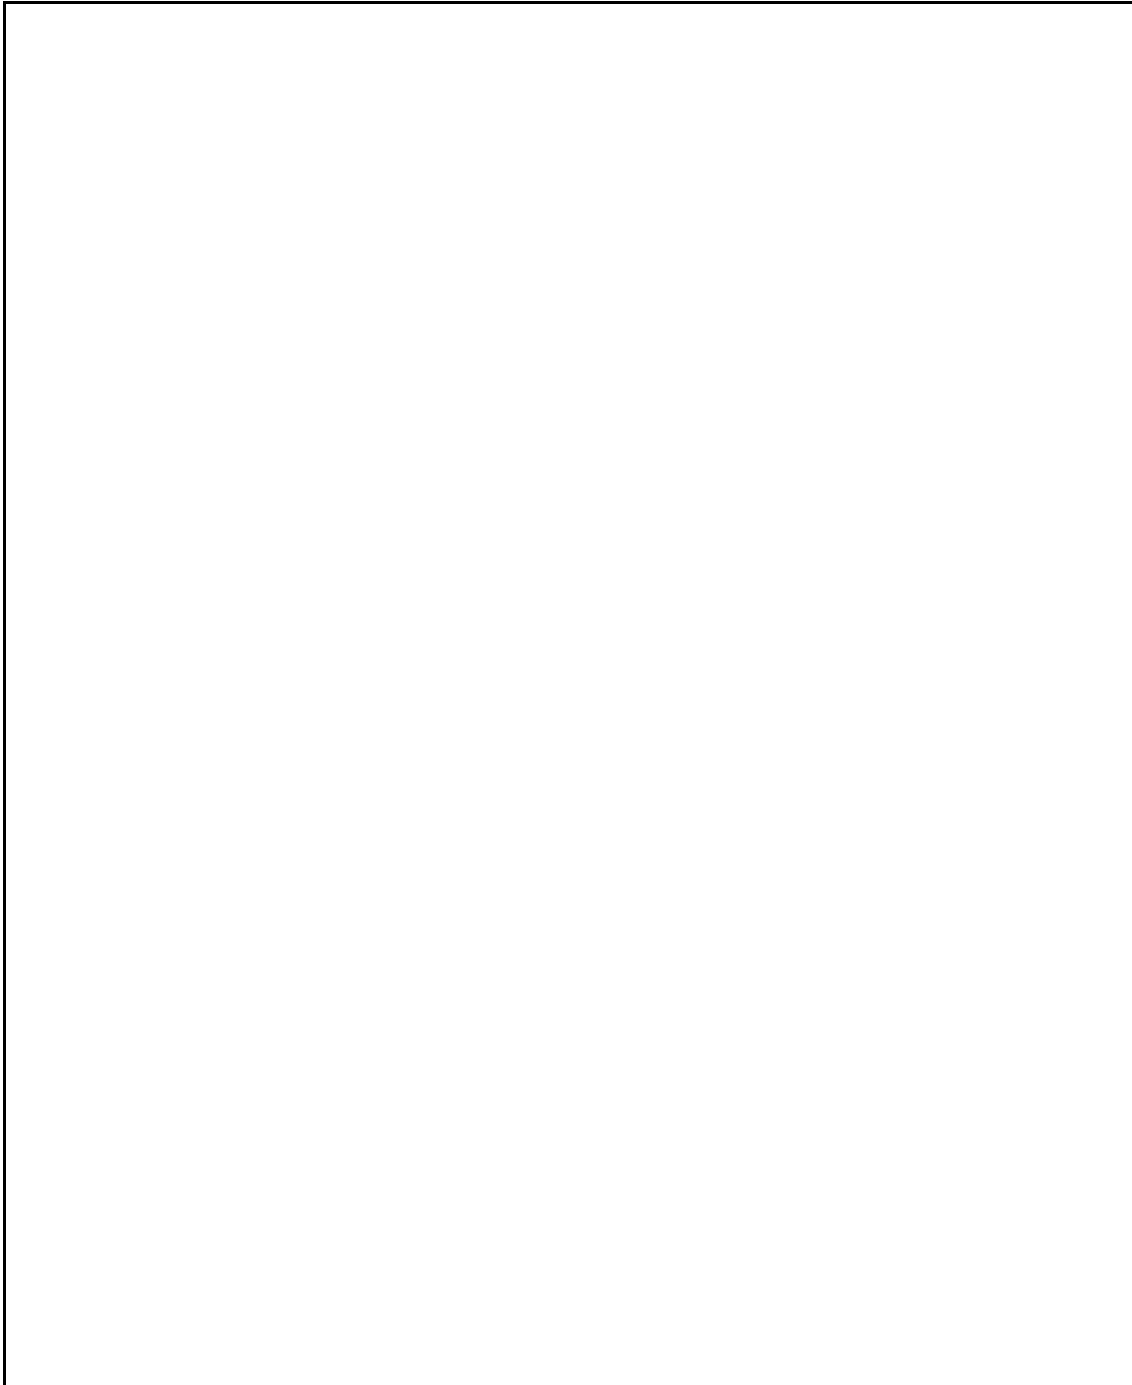

④ Stored in a Cold Place

Throughout the production, storage, transportation, delivery, and sales stages, food is consistently managed to keep the temperature below (5) °C.
